

WHOLESOME WAVE'S NATIONAL NUTRITION INCENTIVE NETWORK

Wholesome Wave is transforming individual, community, economic, and environmental health by facilitating a national network of nutrition incentive practitioners dedicated to leveraging simple solutions at the local level into long term policy change. Wholesome Wave builds the capacity of network members to deliver nutrition incentive program benefits to their customers, farmers, and communities. As network members, they participate in a community of innovation and learning, have their impact aggregated as part of a national data set, and serve as policy advocates.

What is a Nutrition Incentive Program?

Nutrition incentive programs encourage consumers to spend their federal nutrition benefits (SNAP, WIC, etc.) on healthy foods, such as fresh fruits and vegetables, at farmers markets, mobile markets, CSAs and other retail stores, by offering a financial match based on how much the customer spends. For information on the impact of nutrition incentive programs, visit www.wholesomewave.org/publications.

THE GROWTH OF NUTRITION INCENTIVE PROGRAMS

Since then, the field of incentive programs has grown exponentially. The following is a short history of the field in the last ten years.

2010 OBSTACLE FOR INCENTIVES MINIMIZED

2014 $100 MILLION IN FUNDING

The 2014 Farm Bill introduces the Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) Program, which provides $100 million in grants for nutrition incentive programs over the next five years.

2015 $31.5 MILLION ALLOCATED THROUGH FINI GRANT PROGRAM
